Annual Medical Camp Activities of PIHR Hospital under SDG-3 (Good Health and Well-Being)

Parul Institute of Homoeopathy and Research Hospital (PIHR) regularly organizes free medical and health screening camps at various rural and urban locations as part of its commitment to Sustainable Development Goal 3 – Good Health and Well-Being. These outreach initiatives aim to improve access to healthcare services, spread awareness about preventive health, and provide safe and effective Homoeopathic treatment to the community. The camps are conducted at different villages, schools, community centers, and social organizations with the active support of doctors, PG scholars, interns, and hospital staff.

The mission of these camps is to deliver affordable, accessible, and quality healthcare services to underserved populations and to promote holistic well-being through Homoeopathy. Through free consultations, health check-ups, health screening, and distribution of medicines, PIHR Hospital strives to address common health problems and encourage early diagnosis and timely treatment among the community.

The vision of these community outreach programs is to build a healthier society by strengthening preventive healthcare practices, increasing awareness about Homoeopathy, and contributing to sustainable community health development. Under the leadership and guidance of the hospital administration and medical team, these camps have benefited a large number of patients at different locations, reflecting the institution's strong commitment to social responsibility and public health services.

Through these consistent efforts, PIHR Hospital has successfully conducted multiple health camps and provided healthcare services to numerous beneficiaries. Such initiatives not only contribute to community welfare but also reinforce the hospital's dedication to achieving global health goals and promoting the well-being of society.

During the year 2025, PIHR Hospital conducted several health screening and consultation camps in both rural and urban areas. These camps were organized under the guidance and supervision of Dr. Ankur Desai, Medical Superintendent, along with consultants, medical officers, PG scholars, and interns. The camps included general health check-ups, Homoeopathic consultation, basic health screening, and distribution of free medicines. These initiatives aimed to improve community health, create awareness about preventive healthcare, and strengthen the institution's commitment toward public health outreach and community service.
