Objective:

- To enhance practical understanding of environmental sanitation and communicable disease control through model-based learning.
- To promote active participation, teamwork, and application of theoretical knowledge in Community Medicine.

Activity Details:

The Department of Community Medicine organized a Community Medicine Workshop for 4th BHMS students with the objective of strengthening practical understanding of public health concepts through model-based learning. The workshop was conducted as part of experiential and activity-based teaching to bridge the gap between theory and real-world application.

The workshop was conducted under the guidance of Dr. Pranali Mistry, HOD & Professor, Department of Community Medicine, and Dr. Utkarsh Shah, Professor, Department of Community Medicine. Students actively participated in the preparation, presentation, and explanation of various community medicine models as guided by the faculty members.

As part of the workshop, students prepared and displayed working and demonstration models covering important topics of environmental like Sewage treatment plant, Slow and rapid sand filtration, RCA latrine, and others like life cycle of helminths etc..

Glimpses of activity:

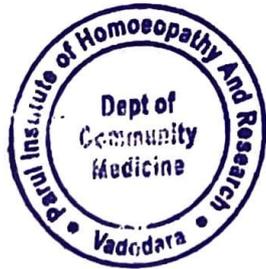

Outcome:

Students developed a clear conceptual understanding of water purification, sewage disposal, sanitation, and helminthic infections. The workshop improved practical skills, communication ability, and confidence among students while explaining public health concepts.
